Have you ever wondered why people love using Facebook so much? After all, there are already many other ways to communicate online, e.g. For example, by email, instant messaging, etc. What makes Facebook unique is the ability to connect and share with the people you care about simultaneously.

For many, having a Facebook account has become part of online life, much like having your own email address. And because Facebook is so popular, other websites have worked to integrate Facebook. This means that you can use a Facebook account to sign up with various services on the internet.

How does Facebook sharing work?

Facebook lets you keep in touch with friends and family by sending messages and posting status updates. You can also share different types of content, such as photos and links. However, sharing something on Facebook is different from other forms of online communication. Unlike email or instant messaging, which is relatively private, what you share on Facebook is public and generally visible to many others.

Facebook provides privacy tools to help limit who can see what you share, but it's important to understand that Facebook is designed to be more open and social than traditional communication tools. Share and manage your personal information in more detail in our lecture on how to adjust your privacy and Facebook privacy settings.
